Green Parties in Transition

The End of Grass-roots Democracy?

Edited by E. Gene Frankland, Ball State University, USA,
Paul Lucardie, Rijksuniversiteit Groningen, The Netherlands and Benoît Rihoux, Université Catholique de Louvain, Belgium

'This book illuminates the various ways in which Green parties have organised to resolve the tensions between radical democratic principle and the exigencies of practical politics. It is a valuable and timely contribution to the literature.' – Christopher Rootes, University of Kent at Canterbury, UK

'Not "just another book" about Green parties! Country chapters ...together with the truly cross-national analysis of the concluding chapter,...give guidance to future work on Green and other "newer" parties undergoing change.' – Robert Harmel, Texas A&M University, USA

'Internationally renowned experts provide detailed analyses of the most successful Green Parties in Europe as well as more marginal family members in Australia, New Zealand, Canada and the USA.' – Ingolfur Blühdorn, University of Bath, UK

This volume consists of analyses by country specialists on the development of green parties in 14 countries across the world. It investigates to what extent the parties have remained true to their original identity or have been transformed, and offers clues on broader questions about party types and party change in contemporary democracies.
